An Excellent New Ballad,

Abusing L. Kaffsbury 20th.

To the Tune of How Unhappy is Phillis in Love.

[1]

Let Oliver now be forgotten,
His Policy's quite out of Dores;
Let Bradshaw and Hewson lie rotten,
Like Sons of Fanatical Whores:
For Tony's grown a Patrician,
By Voting damn'd Sedition,
For many years,
Fam'd Politician,
The Mouth of all Presbyter Peers.

Old Tony a Turn-coat at Worster,
Yet swore he'd maintain the King's Right;
But Tony did Swagger and Bluster,
Yet never drew Sword on his side.
For Tony is like an old Stallion,
He has still the Pox of Rebellion,
And never was sound;
Like the Camelion,
Still changing his Shape and his Ground.

[3]

Old Rowly's return'd (Heav'n's blefs him,)
From Exile and Danger set free;
Old Tony made haste to Address him,
And swore none more Loyal than He:
The King, (who knew him a Traytor,)
And saw him Squint like a Satyr;
Yet through his Grace,
Pardon'd the Matter,
And gave him since the Purse and the Mace.
Kaffsbury made L. Kaffsbury

[4]

And now little Chancellor Tony,
With Honour had feather'd his Wing,
And carefully pick'd up the Mony,
But never a Groat for the King:
But Tony's Luck was confounded;
The Duke who smoakt him a Round-head;
From Head to Heel
Tony was founded,
And Tony soon put a Spoke in his Wheel.

[5]

But now little Tony in Passion,
Like Boy that had nett'd his Breech,
Maliciously took an occasion,
To make a most delicate Speech;
He told the King like a Croney;
If e're he hop'd to have Money,
He must be Rul'd:
Oh fine Tony!
Was ever Potent Monarch so School'd?

[6]

The King issues out a Poclamation,
By Learned and Loyal Advice;
But Tony possesses the Nation
The Council will never be wise:
For Tony is madder and madder,
And Morrell blows like a Bladder;
And L—— too,
Who grows gladder,
That They Great Tork are like to subdue.

[7]

But Destiny shortly will cross it,
For Tony's grown Gouty and Sick,
In spite of his Spiggot and Fawcet,
The States-man must go to Old Nick:
For Tony rails at the Papist,
Yet He himself is an Atheist;
Though so precise,
Foolish and Apish,
Like Holy Quack or Priest in Disguise;

[8]

But now let this Rump of the Law-fee,
A Maxim as Learned in part;
Who e're with his Prince is too sawcy,
'Tis fear'd he's a Traytor in's Heart:
Then Tony cease to be witty,
By buzzing Treason i'th' City;
And love the King,
So ends my Ditty;
Or else let him die like a Dog in a string.
